Foreword

The young men and women of today face a great challenge in a world of conquest tomorrow. Backed by an understanding and capable faculty who have labored endlessly to instruct us in the humanities, in the sciences, and in the vocational arts, we, the ninety-seventh graduating class of Stevens High School, feel ready to meet this challenge unafraid.

Well prepared by a wide-range curriculum suited to the diverse needs of every student, the class of 1965 leaves the halls of Stevens High School with a deep feeling of obligation and respect to the faculty and advisors of our alma mater.

Advice and Counsel

To The Class of '65 —
It is with mixed emotions that I congratulate you upon your graduation. As your principal and as a parent, I am proud of your careers here at Stevens. Your many academic and extracurricular accomplishments have been a source of satisfaction to our school and to me personally. It seems incredible that your high school years are now completed. It is small wonder that I review the past four years with nostalgia, well remembering your first year at Stevens. However, we should not dwell upon the past and its many wonderful moments. Instead, it is to the future we should look, using the past and its lessons upon which to build a better life for all.
pleted a rigorous educational experience. Stevens has demanded and I am certain I speak for all of us when I say you have just comexpected your very best. While here you have acquired practical knowledge intermixed with broad cultural opportunities. You have had the benefits of a dedicated faculty. The values you have gained in this school can bring you dividends of happiness, understanding and wisdom if you accept the responsibility of serving mankind to the best of your abilities. Stevens has made every effort to prepare you for the future. It is now up to you.
Someone once remarked that there is plenty of room at the top, but the toughest part of getting there is finding your way through the crowd at the bottom!
My graduation wish for each of you is that you reach the pinnacles of your chosen careers, but in so doing you never lose your humility, honor and respect for others.

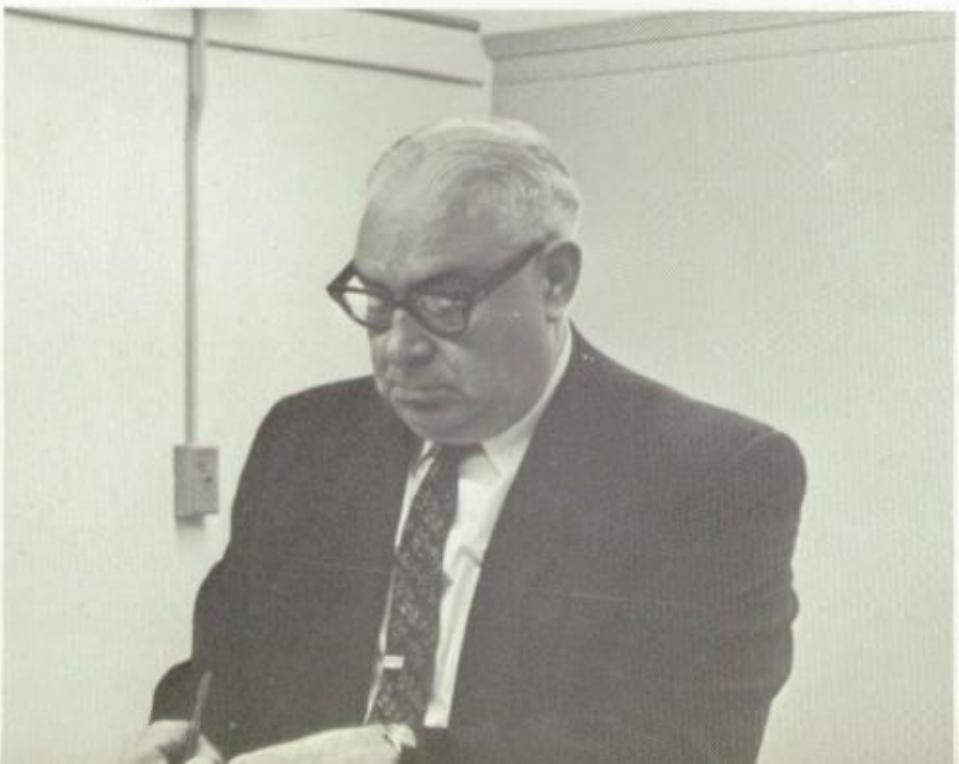
Frederick W. Carr, Principal

Mr. Carr looks up to face another problem in the administration of the school.

Mrs. Hill's unfailing good humor encourages students and faculty alike.

Many a situation comedy has been written about the confusion that arises when the students of a high school attempt to take over the administration. The students of Stevens need spend only a few minutes in the school offices to realize that such an undertaking would be doomed to disaster. We can only feel admiration for the capable direction of Mr. Carr and Mr. Gray who, aided by Mrs. Kuzmich and Mrs. Hill, keep the school running smoothly and efficiently amid the tangle of red-tape and details that faces them daily. Our congratulations and gratitude go to these skillful administrators, whose efforts enable us to derive the maximum benefit from our education at Stevens.

Mr. Gray's apparent gravity in dealing with cases of tardiness belies his understanding nature.



In over twenty years of service, Mrs. Kuzmich has never failed a student with a problem.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF STEVENS HIGH SCHOOL

The philosophy of Stevens High School may be summarized as follows: We realize that a public school must meet the needs of many individuals with varying abilities and staff sufficient diversity to permit a Stevens education to have real meaning and AND STAff sufficient diversity to permit a Stevens education to have real meaning a a practical value for every student. This philosophy is predicted upon the following bases:

1. That a Public Institution Stevens should aim to educate all students in the Community.
2. That it should thus follow that Stevens should offer a curriculum and co-curricular activities commensurate to the abilities of and plan to develop the potential of all students.
3. That, under most circumstances, the educational aims of Stevens can best be met by grouping the students according to their ability and achievement.
4. That, furthermore, these aims can best be attained by limiting the size of classes to generally accepted educational norms.
5. That because of the sociological and economic nature of the Community, because of the traditions of the School, because of the matter in which the Administration and the Faculty generally approach the task of teaching, Steven can be interpreted as educationally Conservative. The connotation of "Conservative" in this context is that set forth in the apothegm: "Be not the first by whom he new is tried, nor yet the last to lay the old aside."
6. That the above characteristics are borne out by an insistence upon traditional norms of discipline in the classroom, in the study hall, in all school activities within and without the confines of the school building.
7. That the above stated aims and characteristics are also furthered by requiring that each student work to the limit of his ability, attain and maintain standards of scholastic excellence commensurate with his ability in an atmosphere of discipline and mutual respect between students and faculty.
8. That the aim of all school functions — curricular and co-curricular — is the education of the student and the worth of all activities which the student is offered should be measured by their educational value.
9. That the student who attends Stevens is one who is expected to assume a role in maintaining and furthering a proud tradition of service and success in the field of public education; that each student should subtly but consciously be reminded that he is at all times an example of Stevens standards; that such an example is best set by proper conduct, by the wearing of proper clothing, and by observing the normally accepted codes of sportsmanship and social behavior.
10. That education at Stevens is not limited to the acquistion of subject matter for merely utilitarian purposes, but each faculty member is responsible for inculcating within the individual a sense of self-discipline, the virtues of honesty and of respect for the rights of others and a sense of ethics based on normally accepted values and moral principles; furthermore the role of the school is to help extend the student's intellectual experience beyond the limits of his immediate existence.

Images du Passé Et du Present

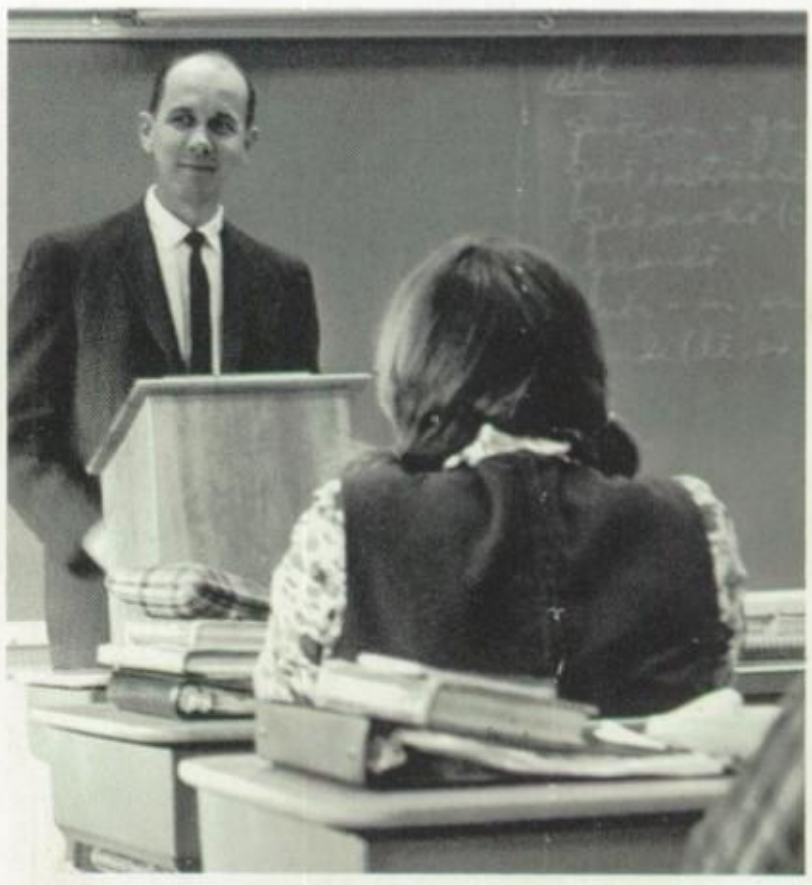
Esther C. Kapala — Chairman, Department of Languages, French I & II, National Honor Society, Junior Prom, B.A. University of New Hampshire.

Gerald L. Rouseau — French I & III, Guidance, B.A. Assumption College, Ed.M. Boston University, C.A.G.S. Boston University.

Stevens students may be justly proud of the quality of their language department. In addition to offering four years each of French and Latin, the department boasts a modern language laboratory which, after two years of use, has proven itself invaluable. Well equipped and capably staffed, the language department offers the student more than a knowledge of grammatical rules and practical idioms. The Latin course combines study of the mechanics of the language with the study of ancient history, philosophy, and Roman thought and institutions. Similarly the French student studies the history, geography, economy, society, and literature of France. The experience of expressing ordinary thoughts in a strange language is in itself the fundamental first step toward understanding the people who use that tongue, and hopefully toward wider world cooperation.

Mr. Rousseau checks his students' pronunciation in the language laboratory, where beginning French students meet on an average of an hour a week.

Donald T. Thompson, Jr. — French II, English I & II, Freshman Football Coach, Tennis, B.A. University of New Hampshire.



Paul J. Jobin — Latin, Junior Class Advisor, Junior Prom, M.A. Boston College.

Everything in Man's Past and Present

John E. Sideris — Chairman, Department of Social Studies, Modern European History, Sociology, Guidance, Director of Adult Education, Business Manager Red & Black, Honor Society, B.S. University of New Hampshire, M.Ed. University of New Hampshire.

W. Wade Perkins — United States History, Advisor The Red and Black, B.A. University of New Hampshire, M.Ed. Keene State College.

Donald Gaudreau — United States History, Civics, Sociology, A.V. Director, Student Council Advisor, B.Ed. Keene State College.

Man in his relationships with other men is the concern of the courses offered by the social studies department. The goal of the department is to teach the student about the past so that he may better understand the forces that shaped the present and perhaps even catch a glimpse of the shape of the future, for only the man who knows history can hope to avoid repeating the mistakes that have dogged man's progress so far. Three separate history courses are offered by the department, tracing man's development from cave dweller to space explorer. Concentrating its attention on the modern world, the civics, economics, and sociology courses attempt to help the student to better understand today's complex problems and the ways man is trying to solve them. To this department belongs the responsibility of producing students well informed of the past and trained for the future.

Frank W. Connor — Economics, Business Law, Civics, Track, Basketball, A.B. Oberlin College.

Robert L. Stapleton — World History, B.Ed. Keene State College.

Students Master the Inward and Outward

Norman Paquette: English IV; Chairman, Department of English; A.M., Middlebury

Jess Piper: English III; Freshman Advisor, National Honor Society; Edgar L. Lord Award Committee; B.Ed., Keene Teachers College; Ed.M., University of Idaho

John B. Tucker: English I; Stentor Advisor; B.Ed., Keene State College M.Ed., Northeastern University

Language has both inward and outward direction. The goal of the English department is to teach the student to work well within the medium of language in both directions. The first concern of the department is understanding, the direction of language into man. If the purpose of language is communication, it is essential that those who are to receive its message be trained to do so capably. English students study literature for this purpose, to learn to receive the message of language, to understand and assimilate it, and to appreciate the effort of those who wrote it. The second concern of the department is expression, the direction of language out of man. It is fundamental that a student be able to set down his thoughts in clear, logical language and to communicate them to others. To this end is the study of grammar and composition. If a student leaves school competent in both skills, understanding and expression, he has the basic equipment for handling whatever problems may confront him.

Paul Magoon: English I & III; Junior Prom, Camera Club; Junior Advisor; B.Ed., Plymouth State College

Direction of Language from a Capable Staff.

Daydreaming is unheard-of in classes taught by Mr. Paquette. His dynamic style is calculated to keep students continually alert, and it does.

Ruth A. Little: English IV; Senior Play, Sophomore Advisor; B.A., University of New Hampshire

Roger Paul Grenier: English I & II; Junior One Act Plays; B.Ed., Keene State College.

William B. Joyner: English I & II; A.B., Boston University

John P. Hopkins: English II; A.B., Brown University

Miss Leona H. Tremblay: Librarian Junior Librarians, National Honor Society; B.S. Simmons.

Never ask a Junior Librarian what she does. A complete catalogue of her many duties takes more time to tell than the average student has to spend, and checking out books is only a small part of it. Working under Miss Leona Tremblay, the Junior Librarians file crads, keep shelves and tables in order, arrange bulletin boards, prepare new books for circulation, repair books which have been too vigorously circulated, and, one volunteer added laughingly, keep the plants watered. They are salesmen, too, vending pens, tote bags, shakers, clip boards, candy, and paperbacks, in order to raise money both for use in the library and for their annual year-end outing. In fact their services include any thing that will help Miss Tremblay and the students who use the library daily in any way possible, and their efficiency is remarkable. "Time consuming but rewarding" was one Junior Librarian's description of her job, a job without which the library would be in difficulty indeed.

Under the direction of Mrs. Swett, Mrs. Hause, and cadet teacher, Miss Nadeau, students in the Home Economics department learn skills and gain knowledge which will enable them to become wise mothers and wives as well as healthy individuals. Home economics training not only prepares girls for fruitful lives with families of their own, but also lays the foundation for many exciting careers. Numerous fields are open to a home economist including nutrition, fashion, and teaching. Today, majors in home economics are offered by many colleges. Stevens girls can find a solid base for such future work in their own school.

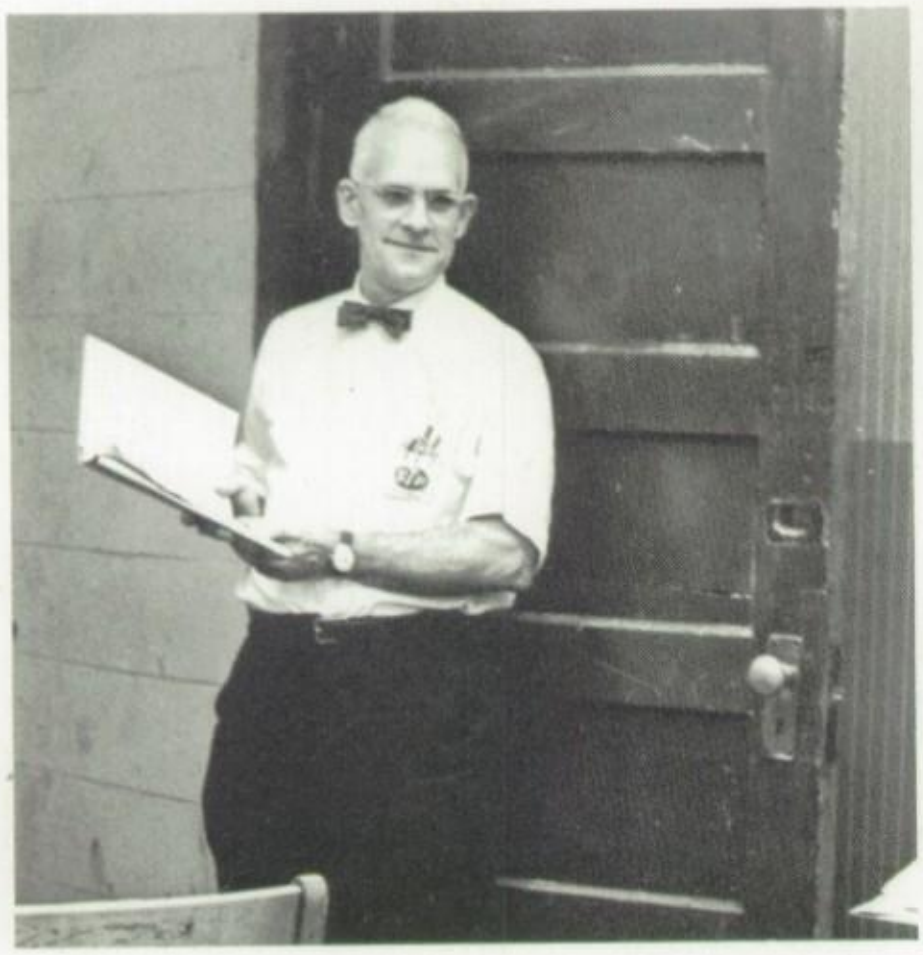
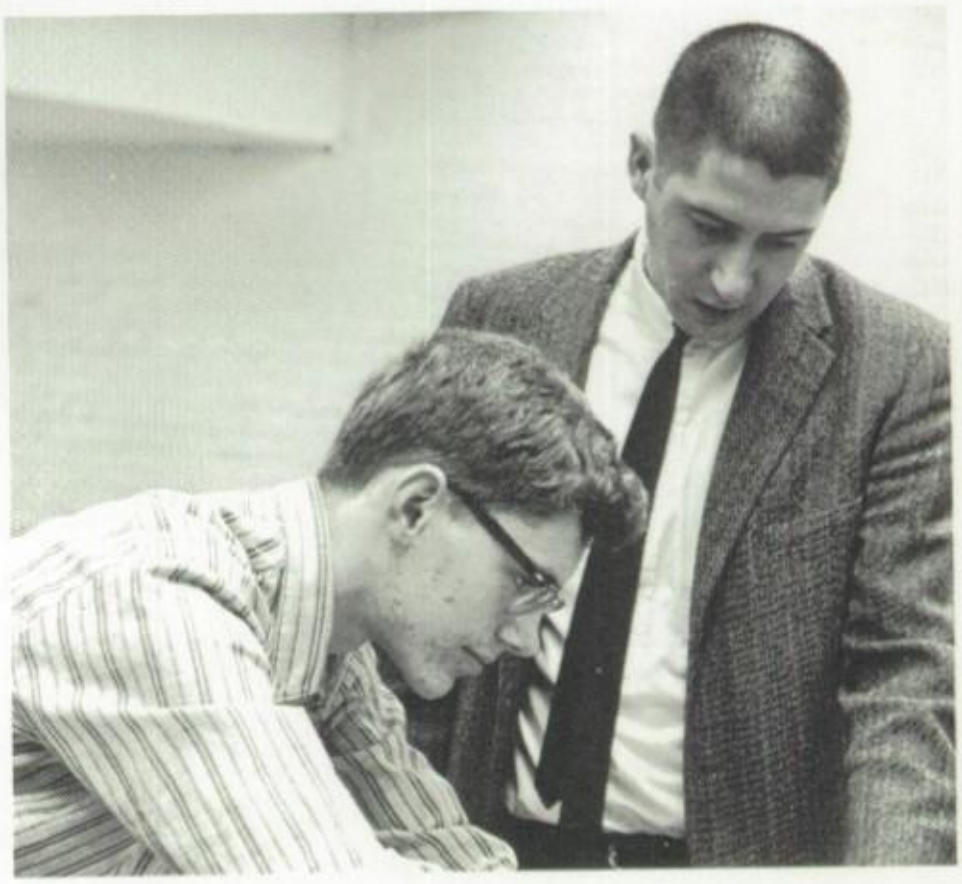
Experience in Working

Victor C. Pomiecko — Chairman, Department of Industrial Arts, Building Construction, M.Ed. Boston University.

Ernest Pyer — Machine Shop.



Maurice J. Blanchard — Industrial Arts I & II, B.Ed. Keene State College.



Ernst K. Dierks — Industrial Arts, B.S.M.E. Strelitz, Germany.

The student whose talent lies in working with his hands is as much a part of Stevens as the college-bound student. In reflection of the democratic principle that a public high school has an equal obligation toward all its students, Stevens offers a broad program of manual arts training under capable instructors. Over 100 boys are enrolled in the industrial arts curriculum, which offers courses in mechanical drawing, woodworking, building construction, and metal work. Under the industrial arts program the student combines a general education in English, mathematics, history, and science with a sound background of working knowledge in the mechanical arts.

With Machines and Consumers

Atmosphere of concentration prevails in the typing room as Mrs. Knowles surveys her pupils' work.

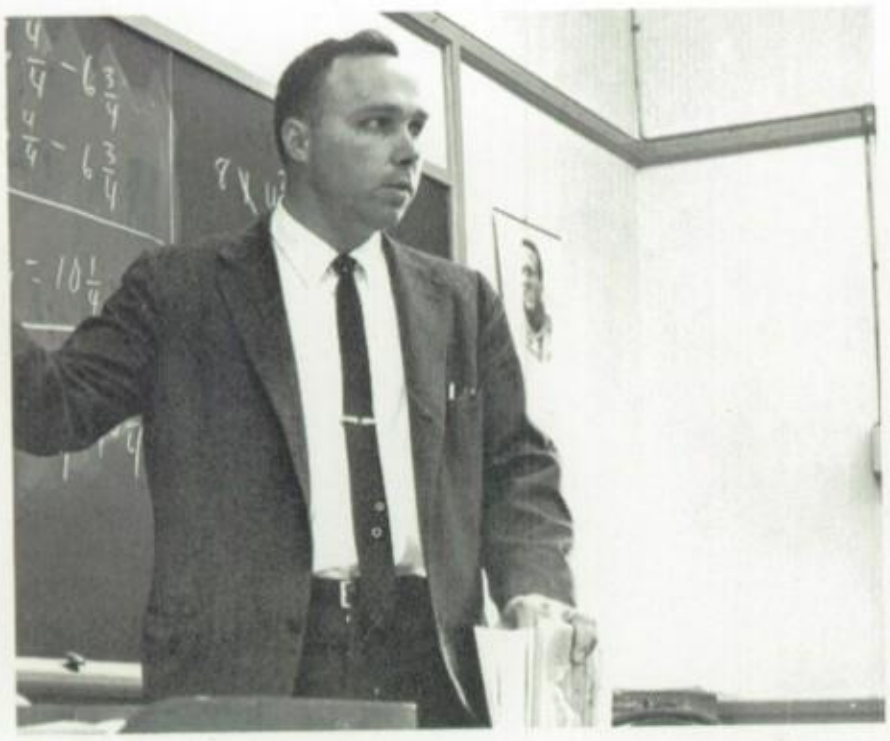
Dorothy H. Knowle — Chairman, Department of Business, Stenography, Secretarial Office Practice, Typewriting I & II, B.E. Plymouth State College.

Myron L. Tucker — General Business, B.S. St. Anselm's College.

Joseph St. Pierre — Typing I, Bookkeeping I, Sophomore Advisor, B.S. Husson College.

The skills that keep the business world running smoothly are taught by the commercial department. Here, under the guidance of their instructors, students prepare for both business and secretarial schools and future employment. Equipped with the latest models in office machines, the department provide a fine education in the commercial skills. In addition to its vocational function, the department solves the problem of the student whose teachers consider his handwriting illegible; elective course in typing is open to all students.

Mathematical and Scientific

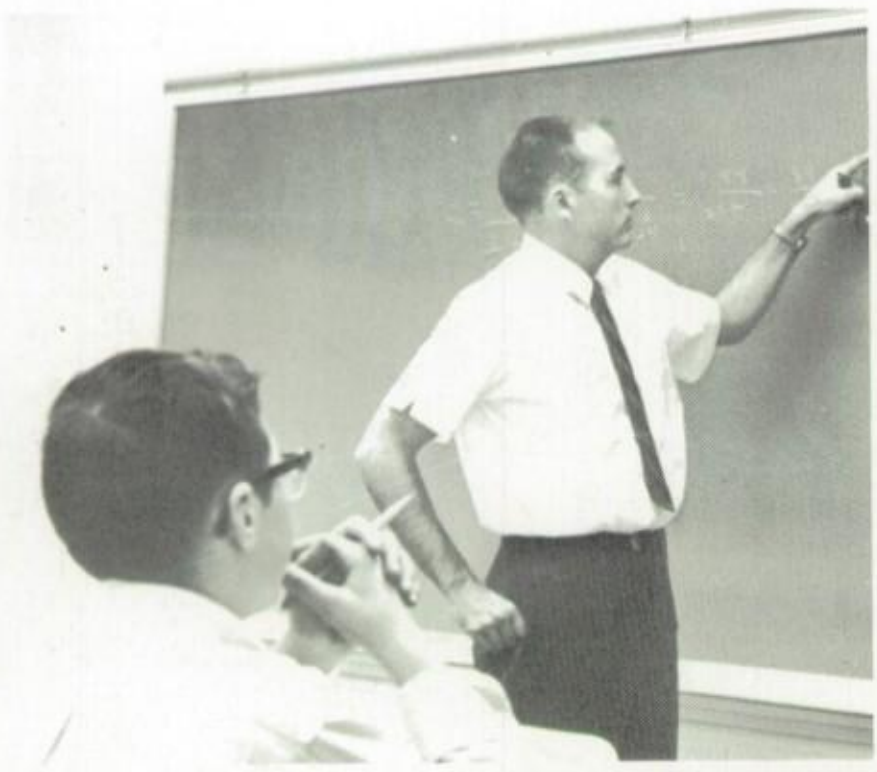


Paul H. Potter, Jr. — Chairman, Department of Mathematics, Algebra I & II, Cross-Country, Golf, Freshman Advisor, B.E. Keene State College.

Aletha Childs — Geometry, Advisor Future Teachers Club, A.B. Bates College, M.A. Bucknell.

John C. Dorsey — General Mathematics, B.S. Lowell Technological.

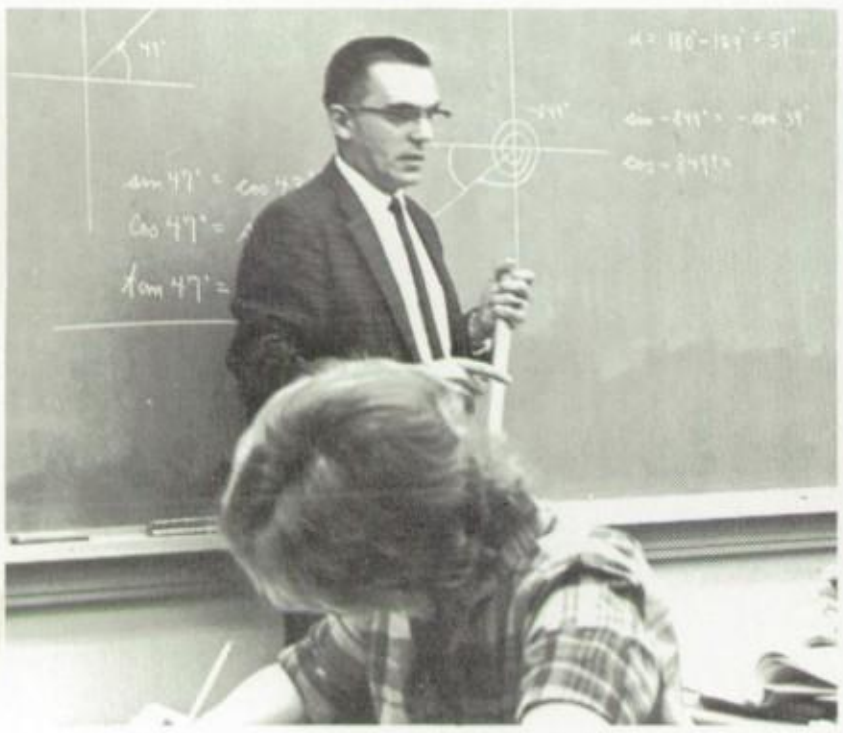
Mathematics ranks with English as a fundamental field in which all Stevens students are expected to become proficient. Mathematical knowledge is, after all, as essential to a good homemaker as to a nuclear physicist. The second largest department in the school, the mathematics department embraces the needs of both in its course offerings. Students in one class are engaged in the tentative exploration of trigonometry and advanced concepts; others are learning to balance budgets and keep accounts. Between these two extremes are hundreds of students studying basic algebra and geometry. Furthermore, mathematics, whether studies as a background for science or for obvious practical applications has an intangible and immeasurable value in the training it provides the mind in accurate and logical thinking.



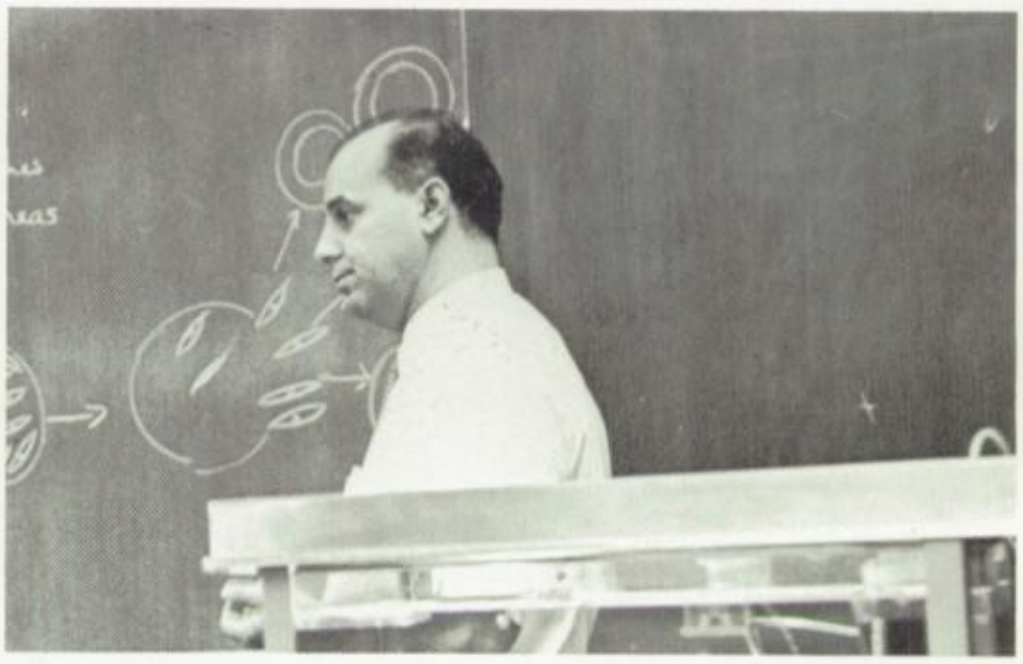
John Stoughton — Algebra I & II, Varsity Basketball, Junior Varsity Baseball, B.A. Dartmouth.

Claire E. Gorman — Algebra I, General Mathematics, Freshman Class advisor, B.S. University of New Hampshire.

Complexities to Challenge



Raymond W. LeBouthillier — Chairman, Department of Science, Chemistry, Mathematics IV, B.S. University of New Hampshire.

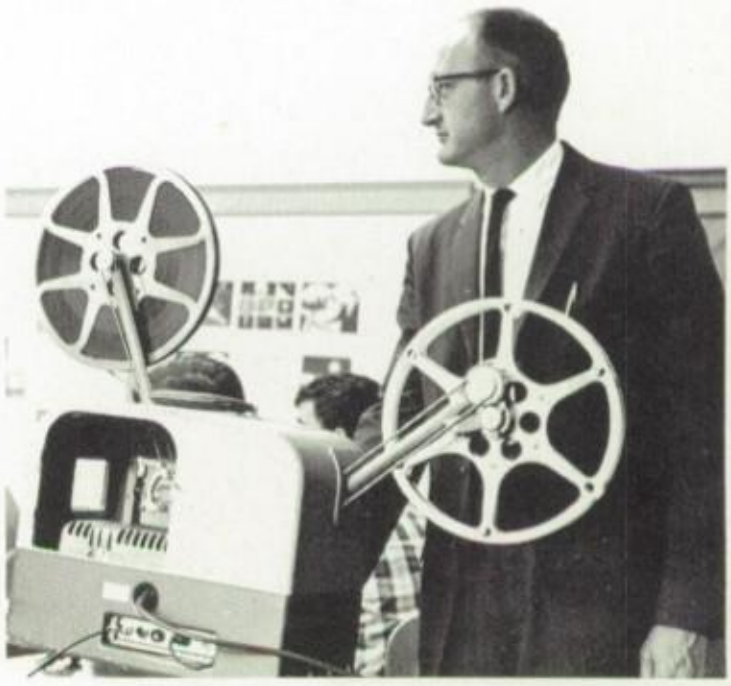


Andrew T. Triantafillou — Biology, B.A. St. Anselm's College, M.A.T. University of North Carolina.

In recent years the demand for scientists has increased enormously. Stevens' answer to this demand is to be found in its science department. To students who are curious about the world around them, who want to discover the how's and why's of things, the department offers courses in general science, biology, physics, and chemistry. In the lecture room and the laboratory, the teachers of this department are dedicated to the service of man's desire for knowledge beyond that which he needs for survival. Interests first aroused by science courses at Stevens have led some to successful careers in the pursuit of scientific knowledge. But whether or not a student emerges as a future scientist, the habits of creative curiousity and logical thinking which he acquires in the study of science will prove invaluable in all fields.

Occasionally mystified but always fascinated, seniors gather after class to watch Mr. LeBouthillier repeat an experiment for their benefit.

Harold M. Van Schaik — Physics, Physical Geography, B.S. Lehigh University.



Rodney R. Adams — General Science, B.S. University of New Hampshire.

This year the visual arts department underwent an important structural change. In addition to the usual two class hours per week, a third hour, used for special projects or extra work on class projects, was offered to all interested students. Among the are- as studied in the course of the year were design, perspective, and color. Special class projects included making silk-screen Christmas cards and visiting the Boston Mu- seum of Fine Arts.

School Is Fortunate To Have Special Staffs

Tantalizing odors that begin to fill the corridors at about the same hour that the average student begins to feel hungry are evidence that the kitchen staff is hard at work. The feeding of four hundred ravenous students daily is the responsibility of Mrs. Myrtle Weed, Mrs. Lenora Carey, and Mrs. Evelyn Kimball.

Our custodians — theirs is the endless and thankless task of keeping the halls and grounds of Stevens neat and passable in all sorts of weather. Little appreciated, theirs is indeed a vital job: Clarence Bonneau, Raymond Gaudette, John Roberts, Stanley Kendall.

Girls Physical Education

Miss Linda Bell: Head of the Girls Athletic Department, Girls Field Hockey and Basketball; B. Ed. Keene State College.

"To develop followers as well as leaders" is a major objective of the girls' physical education program, in the words of Miss Linda Bell, who, in her first year of teaching, directs physical education and sports activities both at Stevens and at the junior high school. Of no lesser importance are the other considerations of her program: the development of overall body-coordination and physical fitness, of basic athletic skills, of interest in sports through understanding, and of the value of good sportsmanship. Reflecting these far-reaching goals, Miss Bell has added to the standard basketball, volleyball, soccer, and softball, other activities of wide interest: stunts and tumbing, track and field, safety and first aid instruction, badminton, tennis, and golf. The girls' field hockey and basketball teams are under her guidance. But although her present slate of activities is full, Miss Bell — the embodiment of the good sportsmanship she promotes in her classes — looks forward with enthusiam to the possible future expansion of the physical education program for girls.

Excited girls perform an intricate maneuver called a "merry-go-round."

Boys Physical Education

With Physical Education at Stevens High School being limited to only first and second year students participating just twice a week, we present as well rounded program as time will permit.

We have calisthenics at the beginning of each class throughout the year, and we evaluate this part of the program with a fitness test twice a year. The remainder of the time is devoted to activities which help the student become a better participant, a better spectator and a better citizen. These goals are accomplished by competing in and learning about such activities as: football, soccer, volleyball, basketball, gymnastics, wrestling, softball, track, golf, and tennis. Many are of great value in later ife.

We hope to have in the near future a more thorough Physical Education course for everyone in the school.

Mr. Robert K. Underhill: Director of Physical Education and Athletics, Varsity Football Coach; B.S. University of Rhode Island.

Class Day

Led by class marshal, Paul Kuk, the senior class, in traditional caps and gowns, marched slowly into the auditorium on June 10, 1964. The occasion — Class Day — was presided over by senior class officers Thomas Kittredge, Stephen Borofsky, Donna Diamond, and Hazel Livingston. With mingled feelings of sorrow and pride, the student body gathered together for the last time, while scholarship awards were announced by Mr. Carr. Having heard the impressive list of awards, amounting to over $15,000 in scholarship money, all agreed that the senior class of '64 was indeed outstanding. A change of pace was provided by the reading of the class will, history, and prophecy. Looking to the future, John Ring, the 1964 editor of The Red and Black, named Frank Witkowski the yearbook's new editor. Finally, the pageantry of Class Day came to a close as Thomas Kittredge handed the symbolic gavel to junior class president, Alfred Martel, who accepted it with great pride. The end of the Class Day Exercises marked the passage of yet another class out of the doors of Stevens.

Linda Read is congratulated by Mr. Carr as she receives the Kiwanis Club Award.

For outstanding work in the Distributive Education Department, Terry Desmarais is acknowledged by receiving the Sears Roebuck Foundation Award.

Hazel Livingston smiles happily on her newly won D.A.R. Good Citizen Award, presented by Mrs. Dora Richardson.

Spring: Time For Formality

May 8 saw the prosaic and utterly unromantic Stevens High School gymnasium transformed into an "Enchanted Sea." An apparent miracle, the metamorphosis was actually the result of four months of planning and hard work directed by Prom Chairman Jeffrey Davis and Assistant Chairman Sandy Roy. Translating Art Chairman Ron Garceau's theme into green-and-blue reality, the Prom Committee and the members of the class combined their efforts to make the 1964 Junior Prom the most memorable event of the year.

Without the experienced counsel of Mr. Magoon there would have been no Prom at all. Jeff Davis offers him the thanks of the class.

Gloomy November became carnival time at Stevens as the Future Homemakers of America presented "Carousel," the first annual F.H.A. Dance, on the evening of November 7. Under Eileen Davis, Decorations Chairman, the gym was turned into a vast merry-go-round complete with high-stepping horses and red and white streamers. Co-chairmen for the highly successful event were Andrea Towle and Bonnie Chamberlain, whose efforts resulted in an evening of pleasure for all who attended.

In June of 1964, the above four girls and seven boys represented Stevens High School at Girls' and Boys' State sessions at U.N.H. For one week, the students attended lectures and classes to widen their understanding of local and state government.

St. Paul's summer school program provides New Hampshire's most promising high school students with an opportunity to study subjects not available in their regular high school curricula. For six weeks, approximately 150 boys and girls live and work together in a highly stimulating and intellectual atmosphere. Subjects offered include advanced chemistry, physics, and biology, advanced math courses, German Russian, and Greek, and modern European history. Before graduation, each student must also fulfill the English requirement. One of the most important events of the summer is College Day; at this time, admissions representatives from numerous colleges such as Smith, Harvard, Bates, and Colby are available for interviews with St. Paul's students and their parents. At the close of an exhausting six weeks, students return home armed with valuable experience for college and an enriched store of knowledge. The following Stevens' seniors attended St. Paul's in the summer of 1964: Craig Pastore, George Boccia, Frank Witkowski, Bob Lucklury, Pam Moore, Pam White, and Kathy Cram.

Election to the National Honor Society is the highest scholastic honor which Stevens High School can bestow. Representing the outstanding students of the school in scholarship, leadership, character, and service, the Society members hope to be more active than in previous years and to make a meaningful contribution to their school.

and Athletics

The members of the N.A.S.S. are FRONT ROW: F. Carr, C. Debay. BACK ROW: R. Luckury, G. Bissonnette, R. Adams, M. Ferriter, R. Meador, R. Garceau. In order to belong to the N.A.S.S., an athlete must earn at least two major athletic letters and maintain an academic average of 80 percent.

The purpose of the Varsity 'S' Club is to support the athletic program through the promotion of school spirit and to set a standard of sportsmanship both on and off the athletic field. To become a member, a person must be a male athlete eligible for sports and must have at least one letter in a major sport, or two in a minor sport. One letter for managing is valued equally with a minor sport letter. Money is raised by the following means: dances, wrestling tournaments, and basketball games. This money has been used to buy a gym banner, trophies, a film projector, and other items.

Through recognition of athletes, the Varsity "S" Club hopes to promote school spirit. Meeting here are members, FRONT ROW: T. Buinicky, G. Roberts, C. DeBay, G. Bissonnette, M. DRAMATICS CLUB

After a year of dormancy, the Stevens Dramatics Club was resurrected in 1964-1965 under the sponsorship of Roger Grenier. Its new slate of officers — Elizabeth Richmond, President; Claudia Struthers, Vice-President; Margie Wilmot, Secretary; Janet Aaron, Treasurer — led the club, numbering about thirty members, in the production of two one-act plays, Three on a Bench and Nobody Sleeps, for their own Play Festival, a short play for the New Hampshire One-Act Play Competition in Durham, and in the writing of a new constitution for the organization.

Tom Weiner and Donna Diamond starred in last year's Senior Play.

In "Three On A Bench," Vicky Bennet, Kathy Kuk, and Barry Brunell played starring roles.

FTA

Seven years ago Stevens High School initiated a teaching program for juniors and seniors seriously considering the educational profession. The Future Teachers of America, whose membership has nearly doubled in the ensuing years, aims to acquaint these prospective teachers with the duties, activities, and responsibilities of the profession. Sponsored by Miss Aletha Childs, the Future Teachers chose the following officers for 1964-1965: Sharlene Bradley, president; Anastasia Paul, vice-president; Susan Powers, treasurer; Judith Hunt, secretary. Meetings during the first half of the year feature speakers on subjects concerning teaching careers, and students are familiarized with the preparation required for their careers. During the second semester, this preliminary work is followed by actual teaching practice within the Claremont school system, and experience which often contributes heavily to a student's final career decision. By offering participants an early opportunity to become acquainted with the teaching field, the FTA makes a valuable contribution both to its members and to the field of education.

FHA

"Toward New Horizons" is the cheerful and challenging motto of the Future Homemakers of America, a national organization of girls studying homemaking. Advised by Mrs. Thelma Hause, the Stevens chapter of the FHA is guided by Bonnie Chamberlain, president; Susan Leahy, vice-president; Andrea Towle, secretary; Eileen Davis, treasurer. Throughout the year, the club, one of the most active organizations at Stevens, is engaged in a staggering number of services and activities aimed toward fulfilling the FHA goal of improving personal, family, and community life both now and in the future through the efforts of the individual. Although the FHA dance is perhaps their best-known and most popular project within the school, the Future Homemakers this year prepared cancer dressings, made "johnnies" for the County Home, held a Christmas party and went caroling at the Home, and sponsored a charm lecture and tea. Annually they distribute Thanksgiving food baskets to needy Claremont families, and not the least among their past projects was sewing drapes for Mr. Gray's new office! Constantly busy, the FHA fulfill by their many services the eight purposes of the Future Homemakers of America, particularly the one which reads, "to promote a growing appreciation of the joys and satisfactions of homemaking."

Futures in the fields of sales, merchandising, marketing, and distribution await students who participate in the unique Distributive Education curriculum. The program creates a vital partnership between the educator and the businessman; in school, the student learns the principles of distribution, and in his part-time job, he puts them into practice under the guidance of professional employers. The Distributive Education Club of America — getter known simply as DECA — is allied with this program. Organized in forty states and Puerto Rico, DECA's purpose is to create in American youth "an awareness of the importanve of competitive free enterprise to our national economy." To implement this purpose, the Stevens chapter of DECA sponsored a variety of activities — the sale of blazer patches, the sponsorship of record hops throughout the year, the management of concessions at sports events, and the sponsorship of a yearly Employee-Employer Banquet.

Receiving the DECA award for 1964 is Phil Cohen.

SCIENCE CLUB

Born two years ago under the aegis of Mr. Allen Milbury, who taught earth science at Stevens at that time, the Science Club, now sponsored by Mr. Rodney Adams, is comprised of a small but enthusiastic group of curious students.Under President Marya Keegan, the club explores diverse fields of scientific interest during the year by means of lectures, projects, films, and field trips. Its resources are supplemented by literature from the Future Scientists of America, a national organization of which the local club is a member. Although little-recognized within the school, the Science Club gives its members a chance to satisfy their curiosity about the physical forces which shape the world.

CAMERA CLUB

Claremont Camera Club activities center around two locations. The first is the small but well-equipped Community Center darkroom, and the second is ever-busy room 313, where Mr. Magoon, club advisor, makes his headquarters. At semi-monthly meetings presided over by Greg McGowan, club members have the opportunity to practice their darkroom skills — developing, enlarging, printing. Supplementing these practical ventures are lecturers on topics of special interest — composition, for example, or portraiture — and field trips to such photogenic spots at the LaSallette Shrine and Hanover's Hopkins Center. Whether his camera is a simple black box or a bewilderingly complicated Yashica or Rolleiflex, the amateur photographer is welcome here.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Striving to make itself a more influential and useful organization, the Stevens Student Council revised its constitution this year. Although it has suffered many setbacks, the council hopes that within the next two years it will be able to bring an American Field Service foreign exchange student to Stevens. Among its other projects are fund-raising activities for the Cancer Fund, the Heart Fund, and the Citizens' Scholarship Foundation. In addition the Council awarded this year the second of four scholarships in honor of Willard D. Rollins. Rededicated to its goal of promoting unity and spirit within the school, the Stevens High Student Council looks forward to an increasingly fruitful future.

The Stentor first appeared on the Stevens scene in 1958. Edited by Kalman Winer and sponsored by Mr. Richard Dyer, the new school paper replaced the old Voice of Stevens which had been given up several years earlier. Originally a four-page publication, the Stentor has grown since its birth into a quarterly magazine-format paper of twenty to thirty pages, offering news, sports reviews, special features, informal essays, and the ever-popular, ever-cryptical Jabberwocky to Stevens readers. Its editors to date have been Kalman Winer ('60), Ted Davis ('63), Robert Gillmore ('64), Frances Touchette, and Claudia Struthers. Faculty adviser since 1961 has been Mr. John Tucker.

Responsible for the paper's success is its editorial staff: Co-editors Don LaPlante and Fran Touchette (FRONT); Business Director Scott Hall; Assistant Editor, Marya Keegan; News Editor, Charisse Little; Managing Editor, Claudia Struthers.

Fall's brisk air inspired sixty-five enthusiastic boys — the largest turnout Assistant Coach Greg Kageleiry could remember — to go out for football under newly-arrived Coach Robert Underhill. Over a month of grueling workouts prepared the Cardinals to meet their first opponent, Sanborn Seminary, whom they downed 14-0, indicating that early in the season the team's potential had started to jell. Their confidence up, the Cards encountered Pinkerton and narrowly lost a hotly-contested 16-8 decision. The ensuing week the Stevens team came back at full strength against its arch rival in the Twin State Valley — Lebanon — and emerged victorious 22-14 after a hard-fought battle. After such a signal triumph the Cards set their sights on the three year trophy shared with Keene. Only after a spirited struggle did the scrappy Stevens team relinquish the game and the trophy 6-0. The Keene loss marked an ominous turn in the team's fortunes. After fighting to a 22-14 win over Woodbury, the Cards dropped the last two games to Monadnock and Bishop Brady by scores of 14-0 and 16-8 respectively, a gloomy finish to the 1964 football season. Stevens' record earned them sixth place in Division III, but the record, as Coach Underhill pointed out, did not tell the entire story. Encouraged by the number of experienced players who will be returning in 1965, he called the season "disappointing in some aspects but highly promising for the future."

Out-classed by many of the bigger schools of the state, the Cardinals were plagued by illness and injuries all season long, so that only three games were played with all of the boys on the team present. Even though the team didn't have a very impressive record, the boys were always trying their hardest, and they never gave up. Showing the courage and spirit that Stevens teams have always been noted for, the ball players finished the season with two impressive victories, ending that season on a much happier note than in the past two years.

Although, the girls' basketball teams attract no cheering crowds or lavish attention, they have more fun, they all agree, than the boys' teams ever could. Finishing 4-4 for the season, the eight-girl varsity team, in the words of Co-Captain Bobbe Easter, "worked together as a team and left the admirable reputation of Stevens students wherever they travelled."

Freshmen

Being a Freshman is a new life for the student. Each student has new opportunities, such as debating, dramatics, camera club, and other extra-curricular activities that weren't available in the previous years. In the Freshman year the students are treated like young adults instead of being led around by the hand. They are expected to behave in an adult manner, and most of them respond to this treatment in a sensible way. The Freshman year of high school is the one that starts you on your way to a success or failure. The harder the student works, the easier it will be for him in the future years. The pattern set as a Freshman could be the pattern for life.

Sophomores

We, the Class of '67, are past the infancy of our Freshman year and are taking greater strides toward success. With added confidence and responsibility in upholding high ideals, we face the realization of Stevens as a way of life. As a class we have no major function other than the establishment of class officers to supervise and collect funds to be utilized for our own Junior Prom. We do, however, keep in mind the fact that our ultimate goal is to establish ourselves as young men and women in the highest Stevens tradition.

Gary Densmore watches the game intently while Bradley Deplitch encourages the team with a few musical notes.

Juniors

In the past the Junior Prom has been the biggest event of the year for many students. This year will be no exception, for the Junior Class will try to put on a prom which will be fun for all who attend. But many students do not realize the amount of effort that goes into a dance of this type. It is more than just a few willing people can accomplish. Our main objective as a class is to be more united in work and more willing to work than any other class in Stevens history. If we work and work hard, we can put on a beautiful prom that everyone from Stevens will be proud of for many days to come.

The Class of 1965

Putting their best foot forward at the start of another day are the senior class officers: Clyde DeBay, treasurer; Christiane Herm, vice-president; Sandra Roy, secretary; Paul Kuk, president.

Memorable indeed — especially to the present graduating class — was the year 1961, the year when John F. Kennedy entered the White House, Yugi Gagarin entered orbit in outer space, and the class of 1965 entered Stevens High School with a membership of 249, the largest membership in the school's history. They were led in that critical and confusing first year by George Boccia, president; Becky-Lee Call, vice president; Linda Lefebvre, secretary; and Robert Rathbun, treasurer. Awed by the extent of the school and their responsibilities, the class nevertheless succeeded even as freshmen in making their mark upon the school.

As sophomores the class of 1965 grew in competence and confidence, electing Judith Blight, president; Matthew Ferriter, vice-president; Pamela White, secretary; and Edith Parker, treasurer. Every team, every club, every musical organization in the school had a full complement of energetic members from the sophomore class, which spent the year in anticipation of the pleasure of being upperclassmen in the fall of 1963. The major event of their junior year was the Junior Prom. Ronald Garceau's theme, "Enchanted Sea," was executed by a large and enthusiastic prom committee under the co-chairmanship of Jeffrey Davis and Sandra Roy.

As juniors the class elected Alfred Martell, president; Matthew Ferriter, vice-president; Clyde DeBay, treasurer; and Sandra Roy, secretary. In addition to being an active year socially, their junior year was marked by an increasing awareness of the importance of studying. As their senior year approached, the members of the class of 1965 became more and more aware of their duty to their school and themselves.

Senior year — no underclassman really believes that that year will arrive for him. The privileges and honors of the senior year are the reward of three years of study and preparation. Reflecting its resolution to make the last year the best year and the class of 1965 the best class, the class chose for its officers Paul Kuk, president; Christiane Herm, vice-president; Sandra Roy, secretary; and Clyde DeBay, treasurer. In their last year at Stevens the class maintained its usual combination of high academic standards and active participation in extra-curricular activities all the while preparing for the challenges of the adult world. Time has diminished the membership of the class of 1965 to 174 but it leaves Stevens with the same spirit and hope and determination with which it entered.

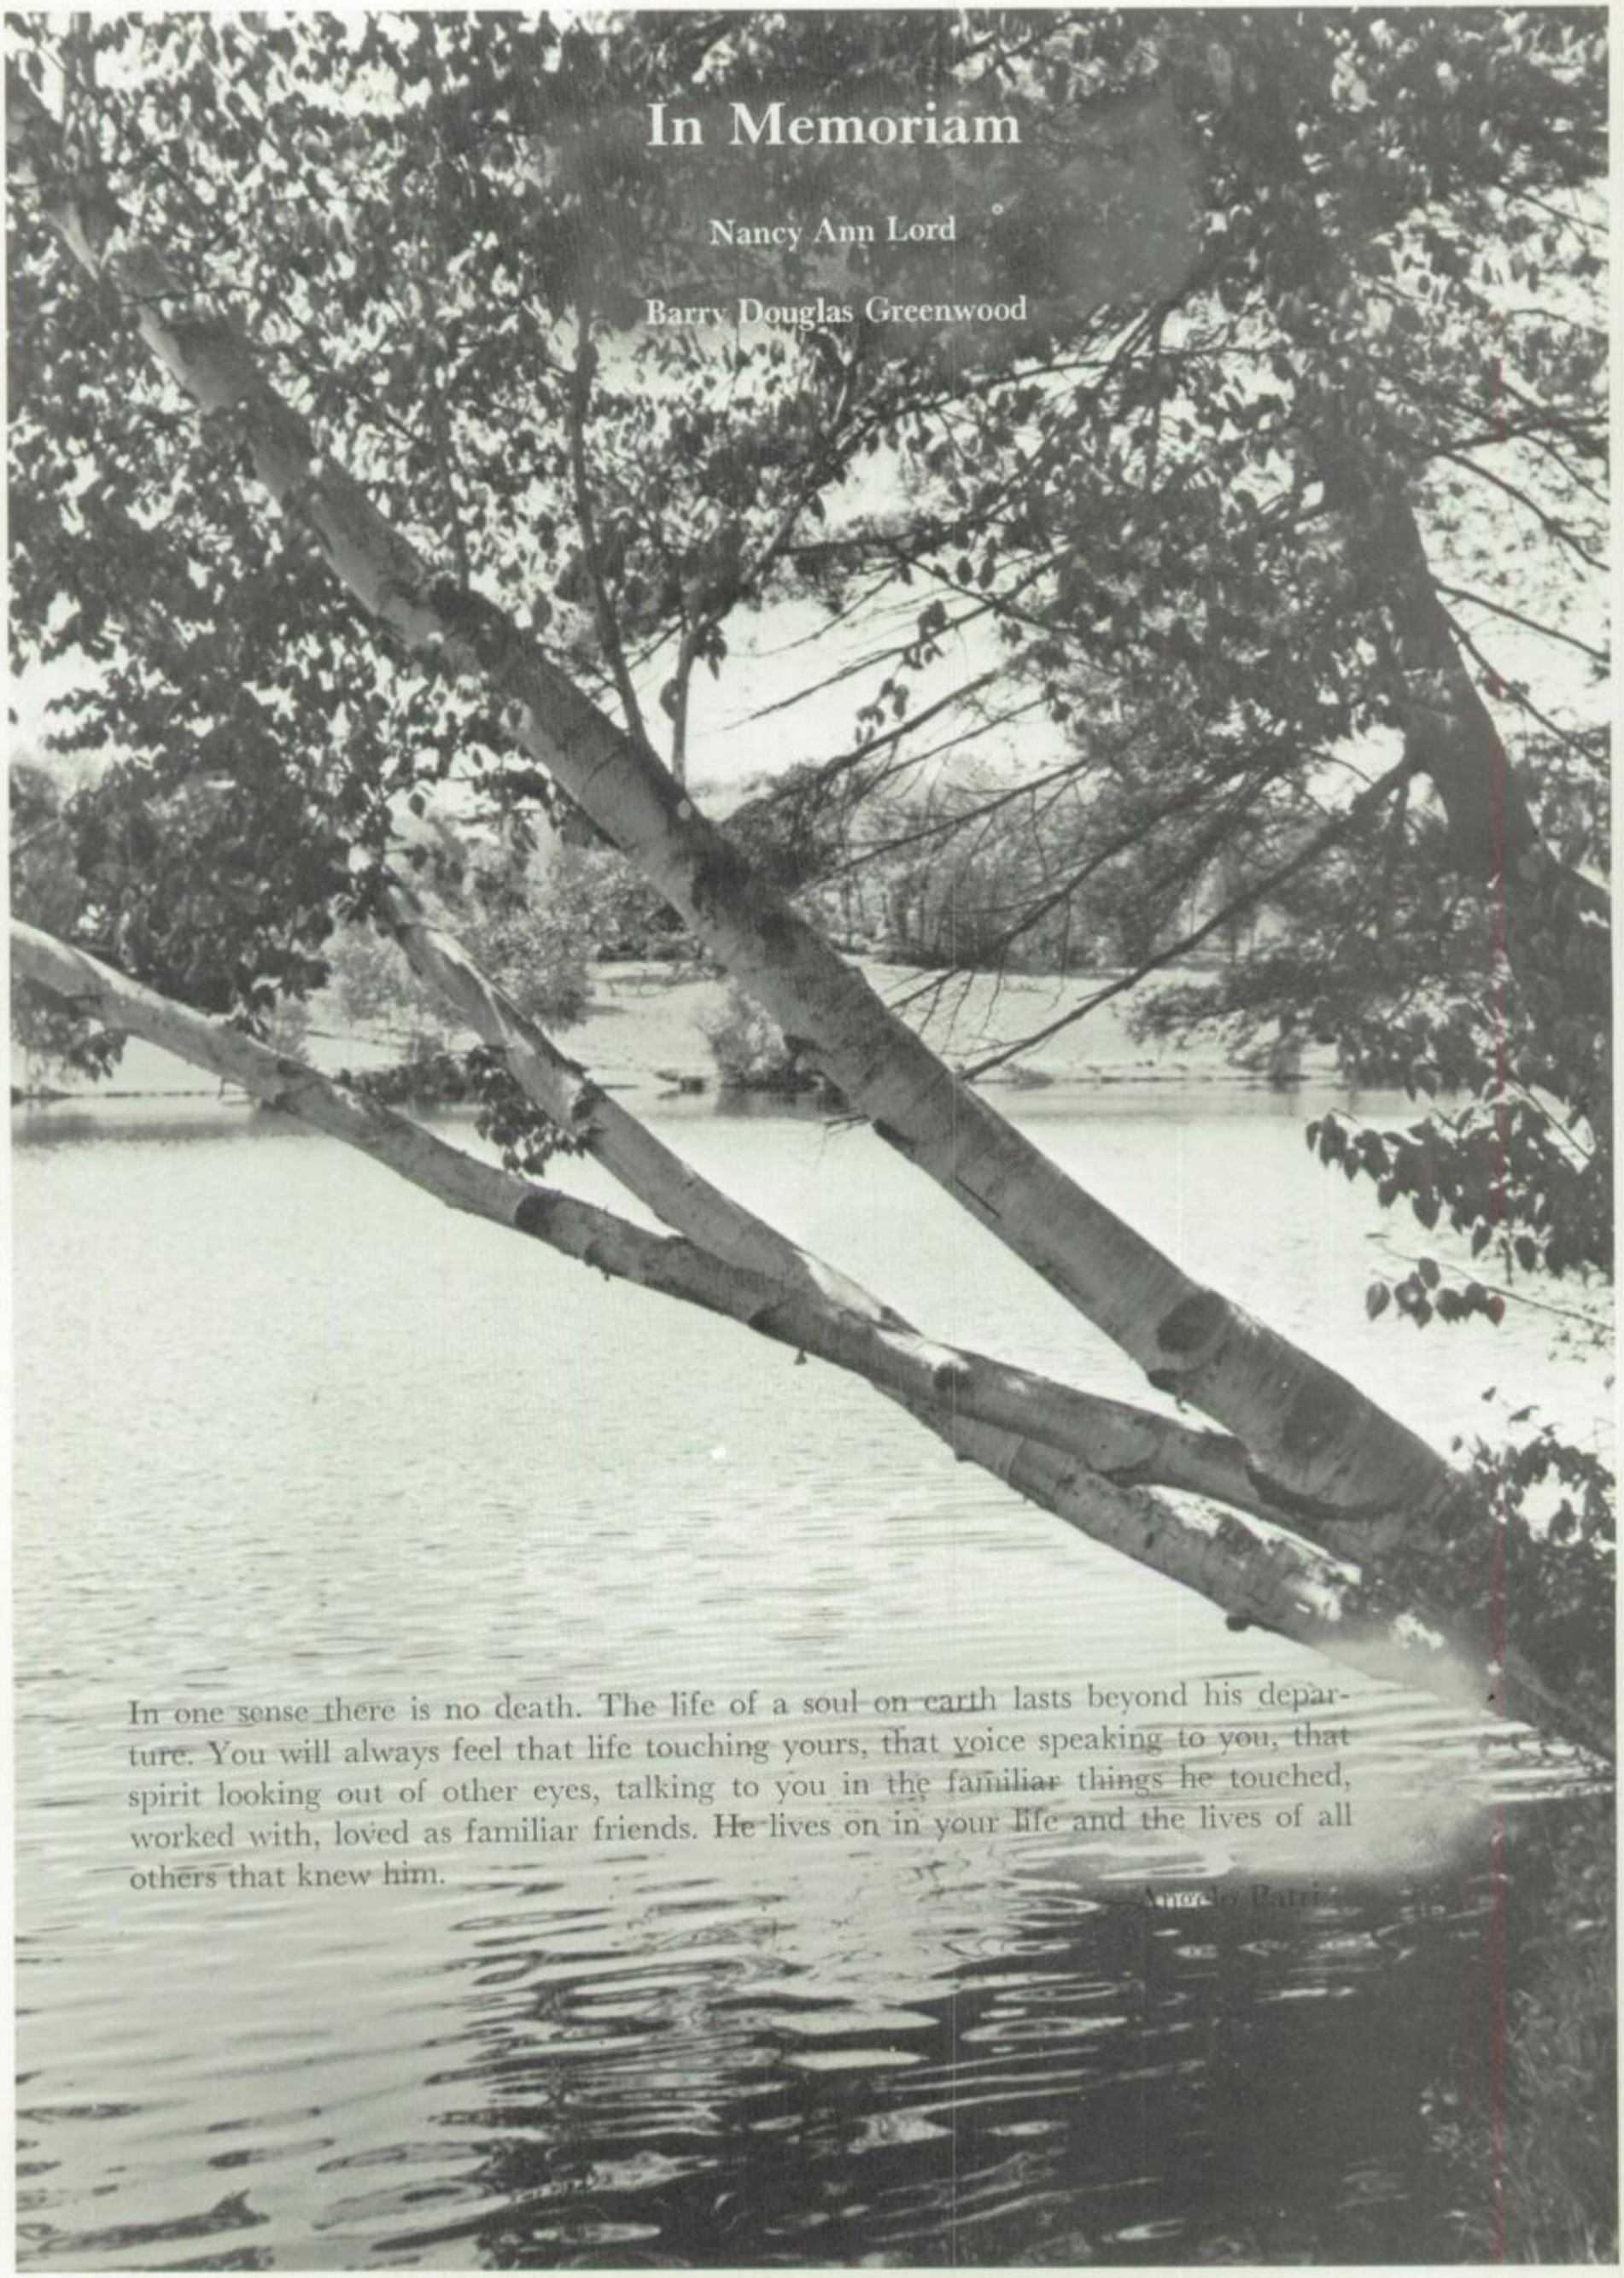
In Memoriam

Nancy Ann Lord

Barry Douglas Greenwood



In one sense there is no death. The life of a soul on earth lasts beyond his departure. You will always feel that life touching yours, that voice speaking to you, that spirit looking out of other eyes, talking to you in the familiar things he touched, worked with, loved as familiar friends. He lives on in your life and the lives of all others that knew him.
